

To Whom It May Concern:

I am happy to recommend Kiefer Garriott to your university. I have had the pleasure of teaching Kiefer in my Algebra II course last year.

Kiefer is a student who pays attention, works diligently, and was able to adeptly learn concepts in class. He used his class time wisely, turned in his assignments on time, and performed well on his exams. He managed this while also playing basketball for the school team, which has a large time commitment. He managed his workload in Algebra II consistently during basketball season.

Kiefer has struggled with showing his work neatly. At the beginning of his 11th grade year, he turned in some assignments that were illegible, which his homework score reflected. Kiefer changed his habits, and consistently turned in legible assignments from that time onward (maybe with a small lapse here and there). Kiefer is a student who has an ability to adapt and grow when he is presented with a challenge.

Kiefer also appeared to learn concepts in Algebra II with ease. He did not struggle or ask many questions, or need additional help outside of class. His ability to do this is noteworthy and demonstrates an ability to think abstractly.

Kiefer is also a good friend. He is kind and considerate to both faculty and students. He is never loud or abrasive. He's a team player and he looks out for his friends.

Kiefer has many of the attributes that will serve him well at your university. He can think abstractly, be a responsible student and manage workload and assignments, and he is a community-minded person.
